PROFILE

Hi, my name is Paul J Andrew ('Peej' to friends and colleagues)

I am a freelance, professional camera operator working in television, video and live entertainment.

Born and raised in Liverpool I have lived and worked across the UK and for several years in North America.

I am equally happy to work as part of a team or alone as a single camera, the joy for me is 'capturing the moment' whatever the subject matter. On a personal level I enjoy watching sport and being outdoors. To relax I enjoy photography and have been a keen angler for over 40 years.

CAREER

I have over 30 years media experience ranging from broadcast drama, ENG news and documentaries, through to educational programmes and corporate video production. I began my career as a cameraman and was also trained to edit (originally using analog and later digitally.) As time went on, I began to gain experience in other areas and eventually moved into producing and directing in the early 90's. Around that time I also established my own successful production company that went on to produce programmes for many international corporate clients all over the world and I have worked across six of the seven continents and even shot inside the arctic circle (I'm still hoping for that gig in the Antarctic to complete the set!)

When asked, I still produce, direct and shoot programmes for selected clients in the finance sector and also the pharmaceutical industry. However, over the last ten years I have now returned to my career roots and, on a day to day basis, operate as a freelance camera operator in TV, corporate video and the entertainment industry.
